

The Village Nation Presents A Private Screening Of

In 1944, the African-American flyers of the 332nd Fighter Group are stationed in Italy, part of the “Tuskegee Airmen” as the media calls it: Black soldiers, once deemed unfit for combat, fighting alongside white troops. From the top-brass meetings where a general (Terrence Howard) endures institutionalized racism, to the clouds, where transport pilots worry if the 332nd can hold off German fighter planes, the struggle is constant.
